NOT THE MAN THAT HE WAS:

John L. Sullivan's Physical Break-
Up—The results of a long spree.

New York, June 5.—[Special.]—The great $5,000-a-side championship of the world match between our John L. Sullivan and Jim Smith, of England, doesn't look as if it would ever take place. I do not think that Sullivan would be willing to toe the line if Smith should withdraw his objections to Sullivan's challenge and come to this country to fight. Sullivan is not the man that he was. He is the shadow of his former greatness, which shines about him like a halo. What has he done in the last year or two? How many matches has he made that he did not keep? He does not want to fight a clever big man. He knows that his wind could not carry him beyond three rounds, and that his great rushes are not what they were. He knows, too, that John L. Sullivan unconquered is a money-making attraction in a show, but that John L. Sullivan whipped is not a very valuable article.

I saw Sullivan not long ago. There was a great and apparent change in him. Fat, and not hard fat, either, conceals the plan of his former wonderful muscles, and then his waist has altered woefully. I guess it must measure as much or more around than his big chest. It is not strange, either, for three years nearly, he has been on one long, prolonged spree. He doesn't seem to be able to control his appetite for liquor, and the amount of grog he stows away every day is startling. I read a personal letter from the West yesterday that said Sullivan had been roaring drunk all the week, and that his conduct was shameful. No ordinary man could have stood such dissipation and lived to tell of it.

It is not at all likely that Sullivan's fight with Mitchell will take place this month or at any time. Sullivan is willing, of course, to have a hippodrome contest if there is any money in it, and for that matter so is Mitchell. But Sullivan does not trust Mitchell. He is willing to have a settled number of rounds with him, providing Mitchell will consent to be rounded just a little and pound a little in return. Mitchell will agree to the scheme, too. But that is not all. Mitchell is the vainest man in the pugilistic ranks, and the one dream of his life was to down Sullivan. He is the only man who ever stood up to Sullivan when Sullivan was at his best, and the only man who ever floored him. Mitchell is a brainy fighter, and is heavier than he used to be, and more clever, too, as far as that is concerned. In training for a fight with Sullivan, he would devote his whole time to getting into shape and would face the big one in prime condition. Then, Mitchell is tricky. If he saw a chance of beating Sullivan he would take it lovingly, agreement or no agreement, and make his dream a reality. In a fight to a finish with hard gloves even, I believe Mitchell would stand a good chance of whipping Sullivan, and then, as I said before, Sullivan can't afford to be whipped just at present.

ANDREW CARNEGIE.How a noted Millionaire Ironmonger Commenced his Business Life.

David Brooks was manager of a Pittsburg railroad office, when a boy named Andrew Carnegie was a messenger in it at a salary of $3 a week. The boy had just arrived with his father and mother from Scotland, the land of his birth. That was very little more than thirty-six years ago, yet to-day he is the famous millionaire ironmonger of Pittsburg. Andrew Carnegie has said: "I owe my life to a game of checkers." I will explain to you what that remark means. The elder Carnegie was a molder in a pottery. Like many Scotchmen he was exceedingly fond of playing checkers. In Pittsburg about that time was a well known ale-house, in one room of which those who loved to play checkers were wont to assemble. Among them were Carnegie and Brooks, and in this way the two men became acquainted. Carnegie's son also came there at times with his father, and he, too, tested David Brooks' powers at draughts. One day the elder Carnegie remarked that he did not know what to do with his son. "Send him down to my office and I will make a messenger-boy of him," said Mr. Brooks. The next day he began his new employment. The lad was intelligent and industrious. Manager Brooks had an old telegraph instrument fitted up in his office, and when the messenger boys were not engaged, he showed them on this how to tick off the Morse alphabet. With this instruction young Carnegie soon became a skillful operator. Thomas A. Scott was at that time Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Pittsburg. He had a telegraph instrument rigged up in his office and wanted some one to manipulate the key. Manager Brooks recommended young Carnegie, and he was employed. He showed such aptitude in managing the movement of trains by telegraph that he was transferred to the Superintendent's office in Altoona. There he continued to attract the attention of Thomas A. Scott, and was rapidly pushed along. He was given opportunities to engage in some coal and oil speculations that were successful, and afterwards made money from the first sleeping cars that were built.

Winston's Winning.

St. Petersburg, June 12.—Novoe Vremya states that the Shah of Persia has granted F. H. Winston, ex-United States Minister to Persia, concessions for the construction of a railway between Teheran, capital of Persia, and Bushire and Meshed, near the Afghan frontier, with such branches as may be found necessary for the development of business on the main line. As a guarantee, the Shah granted Winston a twenty years' contract "to develop all the riches of Persia." Winston is arranging to go to St. Petersburg to make negotiations for the conveyance to Meshed of construction material by the Trans-Caspian line.

Earthquake.

AGUEY PARK, N. J., June 12.—A severe shock of earthquake occurred at one minute after midnight, lasting two minutes. The shock was accompanied by a rumbling noise. Houses were shaken and pictures on walls swung to and fro.
